Scary or cute? Have you ever met a lion in real life? Well, most of us haven't, so here are some facts.

Lions are family animals that usually live in groups of 12 or more animals. These groups are called prides (). The females, who usually live with the pride for life, all come from one family - mothers, daughters, grandmothers, and sisters. The females do most of the food hunting and they often have their babies, (), at the same time.

The males often live in the pride for a shorter period of time, (), and there are no more than two males in each pride. You can hear a male's loud roar from as far as eight kilometres away, (). The roar warns off enemies.

Food hunting, (), is a difficult matter for the lionesses. They have to hunt in groups of two to three and still it takes them a long time to find and kill other animals.
